The Three Mitzvos and the Light of Shabbos

Candle lighting, challah, and niddah restore the sanctity of nefesh, ruach, and neshamah.

(שם ב) In Midrash Tanchuma (there, 2): "הדלקת הנר: 'The lighting of the candle—הדלקת הנר בשבת—for it is written: "And you shall call the Sabbath a delight"—this is the lighting of the candle on Shabbat;¹ ואם תאמר לישב בחושך, שאין יורדי גיהנם נדונים אלא, and if you say to sit in darkness, this is not delight, א"י זה ענג, שנאמר: 'אֶרֶץ עִיפְתָּה כְמוֹ, בחושך, for those descending to Gehenna are judged only in darkness, ובמקום אחר (מדרש תנחומא)². as it is said: "A land of thick darkness, as darkness itself".

1 Midrash Tanchuma, Noach 1. English translation of source: “Our teachers taught: For three transgressions women die at the time of childbirth. All three have their basis in the Torah: niddah, as it is written, ‘If a woman has a flow [of blood]’; challah, ‘The first of your dough’; and the lighting of a lamp, as it is written, ‘You shall call Shabbos a delight’—this refers to kindling the Shabbos lamp. If you should say that one might sit in darkness, that is not delight, for those who descend to Gehinnom are judged in darkness, as it says, ‘A land of deepest gloom, like darkness.’ The Midrash continues: ‘Why were women commanded concerning these three mitzvos? ... She caused [Adam] to die and shed his blood ... She defiled the challah of the world ... She extinguished Adam’s lamp, as it is written, ‘The soul of man is the lamp of the Lord’; therefore she must attend to kindling the lamp.”

Context and connection: The source develops both sides of Rav Tzadok’s argument: the three practices address the loss introduced by the first sin, while light is the positive image of Shabbos restoration. The relevant lamp passage occurs in Noach 1 in the commonly indexed Sefaria edition; Rav Tzadok’s printed numbering differs.

Further parallel — Tzidkat HaTzadik 13 [paragraph 1] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “Time is composed of day and night, and so too is human life: light and darkness, ascending and descending, as is known from the Baal Shem Tov’s teaching on the verse: “Seven times does the righteous fall and rise up” (Proverbs 24:16). For seven days constitute one week, and thereafter those same seven days recur in cycle. Indeed, even during the period of darkness one needs the light of the moon or the stars, which is also recognized as light (Pesachim 2a), so that it not be total obscurity. And inside one’s house, one requires the light of a candle.” Connection to this note: Rav Tzadok elsewhere explicitly places the mitzvah-candle within the inner experience of human darkness. This adds a second passage on the candle motif beyond the Tanchuma cited in the note. Additional Chassidus source — Be’er Mayim Chaim, Numbers 8, source segment 2.1

English translation of the Hebrew: “Our Sages said in the Midrash (Tanchuma, Noach 1) that the reason it is customary for the woman to light the Shabbos lamps is that she extinguished the lamp of the world.”

Connection to this footnote: This text cites the same Tanchuma passage and makes its application to Shabbos candle-lighting explicit.

2 Job 10:21–22. English translation of source: “Before I depart—and do not return—to the land of darkness and the shadow of death: a land of thick gloom, like utter darkness; of deathly shadow and disorder, where even its radiance is like darkness.” Context and connection: The surrounding verse describes the realm of death, not the laws of Shabbos. Tanchuma borrows this vivid image for Gehinnom. Rav Tzadok then treats the light of a Shabbos lamp as more than physical convenience: it represents an opposite spiritual condition, one of order, comfort and revealed divine presence.

Further parallel — Tzidkat HaTzadik 261 [paragraph 1] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “The Holy One, blessed be He, His glory fills the whole earth, and there is no place devoid of Him, only that He is in deep concealment, “He made darkness His secret place” (Psalms 18:12). And when this recognition shines into man’s heart—how Hashem fills the whole earth with His glory— this is termed “He brought us forth from darkness to a great light,” as recited in the Haggadah.” Connection to this note: This explains why darkness is not simply absence of physical illumination: it can signify the concealment of a divine reality that becomes perceptible when recognition awakens. Additional Chassidus source — Bat Ayin, Vayera, source segment 31

בְּמָה הִרְשָׁעִים: And elsewhere (Midrash Tanchuma, start of Parashat Bo 2): רִישׁ פְּרָשַׁת בּוֹ (ב) הִגִּיתָ. With what are the wicked covered in Gehenna? In darkness. הִגִּיתָ? בְּחֹשֶׁךְ. so the wicked: ‘and their works are in the dark’, לְפִיכָךְ הִקְדוֹשׁ בְּרוּךְ הוּא כִּמְסָה עֲלֵיהֶם חֹשֶׁךְ, therefore the Holy One covers over them that which is darkness, וְזֶה גִּיהֵנוֹם – as it is said: ‘and darkness was upon the face of the deep’—this is Gehenna.³

Yet in the Gemara (Pesachim 54a) it is called ‘the light of Gehenna’;⁴ וְכֵן בְּזוֹהַר הִקְדוֹשׁ (חֵלֶק ג, לַד עַמּוּד ב) and so in the holy Zohar (Part III, 34b), דְּחֻשִׁיב שִׁבְעָה אוֹרוֹת שֶׁנִּבְרְאוּ קוֹדֶם שֶׁנִּבְרָא הָעוֹלָם, where it enumerates seven lights that were

English translation of the Hebrew: “The righteous transform darkness into light. That is, from the darkness—the deeds of the wicked, who pursue and burn with love for passing, perishable things—Hashem grants the righteous light, so that they transform the darkness into light and cleave to the sweetness of His everlasting love.”

Connection to this footnote: Darkness becomes the starting point of spiritual illumination, rather than merely an image of punishment.

3 Genesis 1:2; Midrash Tanchuma, Bo 2. English translation of source: “Genesis 1:2: ‘The earth was unformed and empty, darkness was over the face of the deep, and the spirit of God hovered over the face of the waters.’ Midrash Tanchuma, Bo 2: ‘Rabbi Nechemiah said: [The darkness of Egypt came] from the darkness of Gehinnom, for it is said, ‘A land of thick gloom, like darkness, of deathly shadow and no order.’ ... With what are the wicked covered in Gehinnom? With darkness. Just as an earthenware jar is covered with an earthenware lid, so these wicked ones, whose deeds are in the dark, are covered by the Holy One, blessed be He, with the deep, which is darkness, as it says: ‘And darkness was upon the face of the deep.’ This is Gehinnom.’” Context and connection: In the verse, darkness precedes creation’s illumination. In the Midrash it becomes a moral image: a person concealed in wrongdoing encounters concealment. Rav Tzadok juxtaposes this with the contrary possibility that divine judgment may awaken recognition and thereby itself be experienced as light.

Further parallel — Dover Tzedek, Kuntres Ner HaMitzvot, segment 1 [paragraph 13] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “By day one gives precedence to light: ‘He forms light and creates darkness’; while at night one reverses it: ‘He rolls away light before darkness and darkness before light’; for each blessing emphasizes the dominant quality of its own hour; and relative to the night, cessation and darkness take precedence over the light of day, matching the physical Creation of the cosmos: first came darkness and then came light (Shabbat 77b); for one who stands in darkness encounters darkness first, followed by the light.” Connection to this note: The parallel passage identifies darkness-then-light as a recurring structure of Creation and spiritual perception, clarifying why the Midrash reads the primordial darkness as morally significant. Additional Chassidus source — Be'er Mayim Chaim, Genesis 1, source segment 1.52

English translation of the Hebrew: “If there were no darkness at all in the world, how would the goodness of light be discerned? The advantage of light is recognized only through darkness; a person’s principal joy comes when he emerges from darkness into light, for then he recognizes the goodness of illumination.”

Connection to this footnote: The passage makes the transition from darkness to light essential to the recognition of divine goodness.

4 Pesachim 54a. English translation of source: “‘This is no difficulty: one statement concerns our fire and one concerns the fire of Gehinnom. Our fire [was created] at the close of Shabbos; the fire of Gehinnom, on the eve of Shabbos. But was the fire of Gehinnom created on the eve of Shabbos? Was it not taught that seven things were created before the world: the Torah, repentance, the Garden of Eden, Gehinnom, the Throne of Glory, the Sanctuary, and the name of the Messiah? ... Rabbi Yose says: The fire created by the Holy One, blessed be He, on the second day never goes out, as it says, ‘Their fire shall not be quenched.’ ... Why was ‘for it was good’ not said on the second day? Because the fire of Gehinnom was created then.’” Context and connection: Rav Tzadok deliberately focuses on the expression ‘the light of Gehinnom.’ He is not denying its punitive aspect. He argues that for one who accepts the truth of the judgment, the confrontation can illuminate what was previously hidden. The paradox depends on distinguishing revelatory light from the comfort of an ordinary flame.

Further parallel — Resisei Layla 48 [paragraph 7] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “Our Sages of blessed memory also taught (Nedarim 8b) that in the future there will be no Gehinnom; rather, the sun will be removed from its sheath—the righteous, etc., and the wicked, etc. This follows created before the world was created, עיין שם, ה'שכב אור גיהנום, it counts the light of Gehenna, see there. (עירובין יט.) And the matter is according to what they said in the Gemara (Eruvin 19a): דפושעי עובדי כוכבים ומזלות: that transgressors among the idolaters, אפילו על פתחו של גיהנום אינם חוזרין בתשובה, even at the very entrance of Gehenna do not return in repentance,⁵ וְלָהֶם הַגִּיהֵנוֹם חֹשֶׁךְ, and for them Gehenna is darkness; and just as in this world "ויכמו לשבעולם הזה" וְהָיָה בְּמַחֲשָׁךְ מַעֲשֵׂיהֶם וַיֹּאמְרוּ מִי רֹאֵנוּ וּמִי יוֹדֵעֵנוּ 'their works are in the dark, and they say: Who sees us and who knows us?', כֵּן גַּם בְּגִיהֵנוֹם אֵינָם, and as is stated: – "ויכמה שנגאמר: 'הפושעים בי' חוזרין, so also in Gehenna they do not repent, that they continue transgressing forever.

שמצדיקין עליהם, In contrast, regarding transgressors of Israel, מה שאין כן בפושעי ישראל and say before Him: Master of the Universe, יפה דנת, יפה זכית, יפה חייבת וכולי, well have You judged, well have You acquitted, well have You condemned, etc., "אור של גיהנום"; for them Gehenna is termed 'the light of Gehenna'; דכיון שנגכנסין להם – מאיר להם – for once they enter it—it illuminates for them, ומצדיקין הדין עליהם, and they acknowledge the righteousness of the judgment upon them. And as we heard from a certain pious man who said prior to his passing: why the principle: 'The righteous shall walk in them, while sinners shall stumble in them.' Likewise, they taught (Shabbat 88b) that for those who turn to the left in Torah it becomes a potion of death; 'evil pursues sinners,' for the sin itself becomes the punishment." Connection to this note: Rav Tzadok elsewhere explicitly contrasts what one and the same revelation does to the righteous and to the wicked, illuminating the apparent paradox of Gehinnom being called light. Additional Chassidus source — Sidduro Shel Shabbat, Volume I, Shores VI 3, source segment 22

English translation of the Hebrew: "The fire of transgression is itself the fire of Gehinnom, in which transgressors are judged. But the fire a person kindles in his heart for the mitzvot of Hashem is called the fire of the Holy One, blessed be He; it cools and consumes the fire of Gehinnom that formerly burned within him." Connection to this footnote: This parallels Rav Tzadok's reversal of Gehinnom imagery: a destructive fire can be countered by the inner fire of avodas Hashem.

5 Eruvin 19a; Isaiah 66:24. English translation of source: "But did Rabbi Shimon ben Lakish not say: The wicked do not return in repentance even at the entrance to Gehinnom, as it is said, 'They shall go out and look upon the corpses of the men who rebel against Me' [Isaiah 66:24]? It does not say 'who rebelled' but 'who rebel'—they go on rebelling forever! There is no difficulty: this statement concerns the sinners of Israel, and that statement the sinners of the nations of the world." Context and connection: The distinction concerns how suffering is received, not merely whether punishment is severe. Rav Tzadok uses the sugya to explain that for a person who refuses teshuvah, judgment remains darkness because it produces no renewed recognition of Hashem.

Further parallel — Tzidkat HaTzadik 75 [paragraph 2] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "Transgressions within the soul of an Israelite are not an essential acquisition, but merely incidental, and therefore they are subject to redemption, as it is stated: 'And He shall redeem Israel from all his iniquities' (Psalms 130:8)." Connection to this note: The possibility of redeeming sin rather than treating it as an unchangeable identity helps explain the contrast between entrenched rebellion and genuine acceptance of divine judgment. Additional Chassidus source — Tanya, Part I; Likkutei Amarim 7, source segment 9

English translation of the Hebrew: "Until one performs such great repentance that intentional sins actually become merits: repentance out of love, from the depths of the heart, with great love, longing, and a soul thirsting to cleave to Him, blessed be He, like a parched and thirsty land."

Connection to this footnote: This explains how the inner response of teshuvah, rather than continued defiance, changes the spiritual meaning of sin. The opening bracket supplies only the antecedent of the excerpt.

should he fear Gehenna, כִּי־יִשְׁכַּח לִפְנֵי הַיָּדָה "יִפְּהָ דְנָתָ" וְכֹלֵי, since therein he will merit to recite such exquisite praise: 'well have You judged, etc.' וְעַל כֵּן נִקְרָא "אוֹר גִּיהֵנָם" וְנִקְרָא "אוֹר גִּיהֵנָם", Therefore it is called 'the light of Gehenna' that shines for them, וְנִקְרָא שְׁעֵתָא דְּהַהוּא, and it is only for one hour that they are condemned in Gehenna, וְאַתָּה אֲבָרָהָם, and Abraham our father comes, raises them up, and receives them.⁶

וְאָמַר טַעֲמָא דְּהַהוּא לְהַדְלִיקָהּ הַיּוֹם בְּשַׁבָּת: And he stated this rationale for candle lighting on Shabbat: for on Shabbat all Israel are called 'she that dwells in the gardens', כִּמּוֹ שְׁנֵאָמַר (בְּשִׁיר הַשִּׁירִים דְּבַהּ ח, יג), as stated (in Shir HaShirim Rabbah 8:13):⁷ that on Shabbat they arise early to the

6 Eruvin 19a; Psalms 84:7. English translation of source: “‘What, then, of the verse, ‘Those who pass through the valley of weeping make it a spring’ [Psalm 84:7]? That refers to those who are then liable to punishment in Gehinnom; but our father Avraham comes, raises them up, and receives them. He does not leave the circumcised among Israel [there], except for one who entered a forbidden union with a gentile woman; his foreskin is drawn over, and Avraham does not recognize him.” Context and connection: Rav Tzadok draws attention to the limited character of punishment in this account, contrasting it with perpetual obstinacy. The sugya provides the language of Avraham’s rescue; the further interpretation that acknowledgment of judgment itself becomes light is Rav Tzadok’s explanation.

Further parallel — Tzidkat HaTzadik 114 [paragraph 1] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “Whoever is a Torah scholar gathers souls and collects holy sparks from sacred souls that have been scattered into the depths of the great abyss. Through his Torah study, every spoken word of Torah extracts those souls affiliated with him, as it is written: “and he that wins souls is wise” (Proverbs 11:30). And he also extracts his own soul, as written (Midrash Rabbah, introduction to Eichah): “the illumination within it returns him to good.” Connection to this note: The language of liberating souls from spiritual depths complements the image of Avraham lifting sinners out of Gehinnom; the contexts are distinct and should not be equated. Additional Chassidus source — Kedushat Levi, Exodus, Bo, source segment 14

English translation of the Hebrew: “Shabbos points to repentance, for the letters of Shabbos can be read as “return.” Thus on the holy Shabbos Israel repent and recognize that the pleasure they took during the weekdays was bound to something degraded; when Shabbos comes, the Holy One, blessed be He, grants Israel an additional soul, so that their delight is in His Torah and mitzvos.”

Connection to this footnote: Shabbos becomes an occasion for return and inward liberation, complementing the Gemara’s image of rescue.

7 Song of Songs 8:13; Shir HaShirim Rabbah 8:13. English translation of source: “Song of Songs 8:13: ‘You who dwell in the gardens, the companions listen for your voice; let me hear it.’ Shir HaShirim Rabbah, on this verse: ‘Rabbi Yirmeyah said in the name of Rabbi Chiyya the Great: Two companions who engage with one another in a matter of halachah and yield to one another in the argument—of them Scripture says, ‘Then those who fear the Lord spoke with one another, and the Lord paid attention and heard’ [Malachi 3:16]. ... Rabbi Yudan said: When Israel read Torah together in groups, ‘Let me hear your voice’; otherwise, ‘Flee, my beloved.’ Rabbi Zeira said: When Israel recite Shema with one mouth, one voice, and one melody, ‘Let me hear your voice’; otherwise, ‘Flee, my beloved.’” Context and connection: The Midrash expounds the verse as God listening to shared Torah study and to the united recital of Shema. Rav Tzadok takes this image into the special atmosphere of Shabbos, and interprets the gardens as a hint to Gan Eden and its levels of sanctity.

Further parallel — Tiferet Yosef, Bereshit 2, paragraphs 5, 7, 9 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “‘A psalm, a song for the Sabbath day: It is good to give thanks to Hashem” (Psalms 92:1-2). My revered grandfather, my master and teacher, of blessed memory, explained regarding this that the ultimate purpose of the creation of heaven and earth is the Sabbath day. Meaning, during the six workdays, man acts and toils, and it appears to him that he himself is piercing the concealment and recognizing the revelation of the Kingdom of Heaven in the world. And afterwards, on the Sabbath day, man realizes: “What was the world lacking? Rest; the Sabbath came, rest came” (Rashi on Genesis 2:2) — meaning, he recognizes that even the very strength to toil was entirely granted by Hashem, and he recognizes that in truth, from the perspective of Hashem, all is without limit and without boundary; and that these boundaries which Hashem instituted were solely because He desired to bestow good upon His creations, wishing that the Jew should coronate Hashem through free choice, actively choosing the good and despising the bad. For had the revelation of the Kingdom of Heaven been completely explicit, there would be no free will whatsoever, as all would clearly recognize that it is impossible to flee from the Source of Life; therefore Hashem established these limitations.” Connection to this note: The Ishbitz–Radzin tradition treats Shabbos as the moment when a person recognizes that the divine source underlies synagogue and recite the Shema, etc., הַגְבִּיהוּ קוֹלְכֶם וְכוּלִי, and the Holy One says to them: My children, raise your voice, etc., וְהִינֵנוּ שֶׁבִשְׁשֶׁבֶת כָּל יִשְׂרָאֵל כִּי־שֶׁב, meaning that on Shabbat all Israel are like one dwelling in the Garden of Eden, בְּגֵן עֵדֶן, which signifies that then it shines for them. וְעֵנִיג – ראשי תיבות. And ONEG (כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר) (גֶּן), River (נָהָר), Garden (גֶּן), Eden (עֵדֶן), נָהָר, גֶּן (delight - עֵנִיג) which are the three sanctities of Shabbat; (as stated in Zohar Part I, 26a), (וְזֶה חֵלֶק א, כו עמוד א), which are the three sanctities of Shabbat; and it is light, the absolute opposite of Gehenna which is darkness.

And it said: What did women see to be commanded regarding these three mitzvot, etc.? וְנֶאֱמַר: מָה רָאוּ נָשִׁים לְהִצְטוּת עַל שְׁלֹשׁ מִצְוֹת הָאֵלּוּ וְכוּלִי שֶׁפָּכָה אֶת דָּמוֹ וְכוּלִי – תִּשְׁפּוֹף דָּמָה וְתִשְׁמֹר; She spilled his blood, etc.—let her shed her blood and observe her niddah, etc.; וְנִדָּה וְכוּלִי חֵלֶק; challah—she defiled the challah of the world, etc.; וְכוּלִי חֵלֶק; candle lighting—she extinguished the candle of man, etc.; וְכוּלִי חֵלֶק; וְנֶאֱמַר: מָה רָאוּ נָשִׁים לְהִצְטוּת עַל שְׁלֹשׁ מִצְוֹת הָאֵלּוּ וְכוּלִי שֶׁפָּכָה אֶת דָּמוֹ וְכוּלִי – תִּשְׁפּוֹף דָּמָה וְתִשְׁמֹר; and in the Gemara (Shabbat 32a):⁸ וְנִדָּה וְכוּלִי חֵלֶק; וְנֶאֱמַר: מָה רָאוּ נָשִׁים לְהִצְטוּת עַל שְׁלֹשׁ מִצְוֹת הָאֵלּוּ וְכוּלִי שֶׁפָּכָה אֶת דָּמוֹ וְכוּלִי – תִּשְׁפּוֹף דָּמָה וְתִשְׁמֹר; concerning matters of the candle I warned you’, see there. And וְנֶאֱמַר: מָה רָאוּ נָשִׁים לְהִצְטוּת עַל שְׁלֹשׁ מִצְוֹת הָאֵלּוּ וְכוּלִי שֶׁפָּכָה אֶת דָּמוֹ וְכוּלִי – תִּשְׁפּוֹף דָּמָה וְתִשְׁמֹר; which manifested in nefesh, ruach, and neshamah, וְנֶאֱמַר: מָה רָאוּ נָשִׁים לְהִצְטוּת עַל שְׁלֹשׁ מִצְוֹת הָאֵלּוּ וְכוּלִי שֶׁפָּכָה אֶת דָּמוֹ וְכוּלִי – תִּשְׁפּוֹף דָּמָה וְתִשְׁמֹר; and came about through the

the work of the entire week, sharpening the symbolism of the Shabbos garden. Additional Chassidus source — Sefat Emet, Genesis, Bereshit 28, source segment 3

English translation of the Hebrew: “On Shabbos the light of Torah is revealed, and this is the Torah reading of Shabbos. It is taught that the light was concealed for the righteous in the future; Shabbos is the aspect of a righteous one within time, a foretaste of the World to Come, and it contains some of that concealed light.”

Connection to this footnote: The Shabbos “garden” and oneg in Rav Tzadok can be understood as a taste of the concealed light and the World to Come.

8 Shabbat 32a; Proverbs 20:27. English translation of source: “‘I called you ‘first,’ and I warned you concerning the first [of your dough]. The soul I placed within you is called a ‘lamp,’ and I warned you concerning the lamp. If you observe these commandments, well and good; but if not, I shall take your soul.’ The verse cited for the image is Proverbs 20:27: ‘The soul of man is the lamp of the Lord, searching all the chambers of the belly.’” Context and connection: The Gemara’s immediate discussion concerns care in three mitzvot and the gravity of neglect. Rav Tzadok reads their deeper structure: niddah repairs ruach and blood, challah relates to the earthly nefesh, and Shabbos light addresses the neshamah. This threefold correspondence is his interpretation, not the Gemara’s explicit enumeration of soul-levels.

Further parallel — Takanat HaShavin 15 [paragraph 205] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “And the three letters of Adam correspond to the three soul divisions of Nefesh, Ruach, and Neshamah deriving from the three worlds of Beriah, Yetzirah, and Asiyah which extend from the World of the Throne downward; their physical dwellings residing in the brain (Mo’ach - Neshamah), heart (Lev - Ruach), and liver (Kaved - Nefesh), as is known.” Connection to this note: This provides an explicit parallel within Kisvei Rav Tzadok for assigning nefesh, ruach, and neshamah to liver, heart, and brain, respectively. Additional Chassidus source — Shem MiShmuel, Noach 10, source segment 2

English translation of the Hebrew: “How is the mitzvah of challah explained? She defiled the challah of the world. Rabbi Yose son of Dormaskis said: Just as a woman mixes her dough with water and afterward separates its challah, so the Holy One, blessed be He, did with the first Adam: “A mist arose from the earth and watered [it],” and afterward “Hashem God formed the human from the dust.” How is lighting the lamp explained? She extinguished Adam’s lamp, as it is written, “The soul of a human is God’s lamp”; therefore she must observe the lighting of the lamp.”

Connection to this footnote: This is a close independent Chassidic presentation of the very three-mitzvah Midrash interpreted in Ois 5.

written: ‘for the blood is the nefesh’, כל האברים ודם שפכד ודם; that refers to the blood in the liver and the blood of all limbs; ורביעית דם היינו הצלול שבלב whereas the revi'it of blood is the clear blood in the heart, ושם משכן הרוח, and there is the dwelling place of the ruach, וכן נגד, וזוה אר: "תשמור נידתה", and corresponding to this it said: ‘let her observe her niddah’, כדי, so that it atone for her for the blood of man that she spilled.

And candle lighting corresponds to the blemish of the neshamah, וכן אמרו בגמרא: נשמה שנתתי בכם קרויה נר וכולי, and as they said in the Gemara: the soul I placed in you is called a candle, etc., and it is written: "נר ה' נשמת אדם". and it is written: ‘The spirit of man is the lamp of Hashem’.¹¹

And the three mitzvot were given to rectify the blemish in nefesh, ruach, and neshamah. ונתנו השלש מצוות לתקן הפגם שבנפש, רוח ונשמה, ולכן מצוות חלה ונדה נוהג בכל יום. Therefore the mitzvot of challah and niddah apply every day, הדלקת הנר רק בשבת, while candle lighting is uniquely on Shabbat, based on what is written in the holy Zohar in this parashah (62a): נפש ורוח קלין דא עם דא וכולי: nefesh and (parashah 14), there are five levels to the soul: Nefesh, Ruach, Neshamah, Chayah, and Yechidah. Nefesh, Ruach, and Neshamah correspond to thought, speech, and action, as I have written at length elsewhere: action is centered in the liver, which is full of blood, and "the blood is the Nefesh"; speech resides in the heart, as written: "and speaks truth in his heart," where the spirit of life (Ruach) dwells, as is known.” Connection to this note: This passage independently locates action in the liver and speech/ruach in the heart. It directly corroborates the distinctions Rav Tzadok makes here between blood, nefesh, and ruach. Additional Chassidus source — Arvei Nachal, Behar 1, source segment 9

English translation of the Hebrew: “The life of the human being is divided into nefesh, ruach, neshamah, chayah, and yechidah. As we have explained many times, these are action, speech, thought, and intellect—the nefesh, ruach, neshamah, and chayah—and each level unfolds from the one before it. Yechidah is simple will, subtler and more spiritual than intellect and wisdom.”

Connection to this footnote: This provides a broader Chassidic framework for the distinct levels Rav Tzadok associates with the body, heart, and soul.

11 Proverbs 20:27. English translation of source: “‘The soul of man is the lamp of the Lord; it searches all the chambers of the innermost body.’” Context and connection: Shabbos 32a applies this verse to the divine gift of life, and Rav Tzadok associates the lighting of Shabbos candles with the neshamah. The external lamp becomes an emblem of an inward illumination that uncovers and repairs the deepest dimension of the person.

Further parallel — Ohr Zarua LaTzadik, Introduction [paragraph 9] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “my friend, the eminent and pious Rabbi Eliezer Tzvi Ziegelman, may his lamp shine, remarked: it is named after the verse, "but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings" [Exodus 10:23], since the first treatise in this holy work discusses the exile and Exodus from Egypt, thus far his words. But in my view, it is named after the verse (Psalms 97:11): "Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart." And it is stated in the holy Zohar (I, 45b) and in Zohar Chadash (Bereishit 8c): When the Holy One, blessed be He, gazed upon those generations of the wicked, He concealed the primordial light for the righteous, as it is written: "Light is sown for the righteous, etc."; see there. And in Sefer HaBahir (sec. 147) on this verse: The Holy One, blessed be He, took from His good light and included within it the thirty-two paths of Wisdom, bestowing it upon this world... which is none other than the treasury of the Oral Torah; see there.” Connection to this note: The author joins the lamp imagery to the light prepared for the righteous; this offers a broader perspective on the neshamah as an interior receptacle for divine light. Additional Chassidus source — Torah Ohr, Miketz 12, source segment 1

English translation of the Hebrew: “It is written, “The soul of man is the lamp of Hashem.” The meaning is that the human soul clothed in the body is an aspect of the lamp of the Divine Name, for all four letters of the Name are alluded to in the lamp.”

Connection to this footnote: The lamp is not merely an analogy for life: it symbolizes how the Divine Name is disclosed within an embodied soul.

ruach are intertwined with one another, etc.; אָתא בַּר נֶשׁ לְאַתְדַּכָּא – when a man comes to purify himself—וּבְכָל יוֹם יֵשׁ לְאָדָם נֶפֶשׁ וְרוּחַ. and sanctify him, and he is called holy. וּבְשַׁבָּת, דְּאִיתָא בְּזֵהר הַקָּדוֹשׁ (חֲלָק, whereas on Shabbat, as is taught in the holy Zohar (Part II, 88b): בְּשַׁבָּתָא יְהִיבֵן נֶשְׁמָתָא, לִיה לְבַר נֶשׁ נֶשְׁמָתָא אַחֲרָא וְכוּלִי, on Shabbat they grant man an additional soul, etc., a soul wherein is all perfection like the archetype of the World to Come, לְנֶשְׁמָה. for every single Jew merits this neshamah.

אָף שְׁלֵמְדוֹ מִדְּכִתִּיב: "וַיִּנָּפֶשׁ" – וי, And so in the Gemara (Beitzah 16a),¹² וְכֵן בְּגִמְרָא (בִּיצָה טו.). אַבְדָּה נֶפֶשׁ, even though they derived it from the verse 'and He rested' (vayinafash)—woe, the soul is lost, נֶשְׁמָה יְתִידָה נוֹתֵן: nonetheless they used the terminology: "An additional neshamah the Holy One, blessed be He, places in man, etc.," וְהָיוּ וַיִּמְקְדִּשׁוּ לִיה וְאִקְרִי קָדוֹשׁ, and this is 'they sanctify him and he is called holy', in the manner of that which is stated: 'to know that I am Hashem Who sanctifies you'. Therefore, the mitzvot of challah and niddah, לְתַקֵּן פְּגָם הַנֶּפֶשׁ וְהָרוּחַ, which came to rectify the blemish of the nefesh and the ruach, מִצְוֹתֵן כָּל הַיָּמִים; their obligation applies on all days; וּמִצְוֹת הַדִּלְקוּת הַיָּד, while the mitzvah of candle lighting is on Shabbat, לְתַקֵּן פְּגָם מִהַנֶּשְׁמָה שֶׁיֵּשׁ מִפְּנֵים הַנֶּחֱשׁ, to rectify the blemish of the neshamah stemming from the Serpent's fall.

And as we recite in the Sabbath hymns: וְיִבְרַח אֱלֹהֵינוּ מִצְוֹתֵינוּ, which refers to the neshamah, וְנִרְדֵּי לֵוִי לֹא עָלָה, just as one merits in his mother's womb: and a candle is lit above his head, and he gazes and sees by it from one end of the world to the other, as it is said:

12 Beitzah 16a; Exodus 31:17. English translation of source: “‘Rabbi Shimon ben Lakish said: The Holy One, blessed be He, gives a person an additional soul on the eve of Shabbos, and at the departure of Shabbos it is taken from him, as it says, ‘He ceased and was refreshed [vayinafash]’ [Exodus 31:17]. Once Shabbos has ceased—woe [vai], the soul [nefesh] is lost!’” Context and connection: Rav Tzadok treats the additional neshamah as a special Shabbos attainment rather than a weekday possession. His point explains why the lamp, unlike challah and niddah, has a particular weekly role: it signals the return of an encompassing holiness and a foretaste of the World to Come.

Further parallel — Dover Tzedek, Kuntres Ner HaMitzvot, segment 2 [paragraph 176] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “And as we wrote above, at that stage one tastes a foretaste of the World to Come, as recorded at the opening of the second chapter of Beitzah (16a): Shammai would eat every day in honor of the Sabbath, whereas Hillel said: ‘Blessed be the Lord day by day.’ The meaning is: the Sabbath is a foretaste of the World to Come, as stated in chapter HaRo’eh (Berakhot 57b); and in the daily psalm recited by the Levites in the Holy Temple: ‘for the day that is entirely Sabbath and rest for everlasting life’; as written in Berakhot (17a): in the World to Come the righteous sit with crowns on their heads and derive pleasure from the radiance of the Shechinah.” Connection to this note: The parallel explains the extra Shabbos soul through the experience of the World to Come; it supplements the Gemara about the neshamah yeseirah. Additional Chassidus source — Sefat Emet, Numbers, Nasso 19, source segment 3 English translation of the Hebrew: “Each Shabbos also brings an illumination from the giving of the Torah: this is the additional soul of which our Sages spoke regarding ‘He rested’—‘Woe, a soul is lost.’ People ask: if so, this expression ought to refer to after Shabbos. Rather, when the additional soul comes, we see what we lost through sin, because one cannot apprehend the true soul’s will and longing until Shabbos arrives.” Connection to this footnote: This answers Rav Tzadok’s distinction between weekday soul-life and Shabbos neshamah with an additional explanation of the word vayinafash.

"When His lamp shined upon my head" (כְּמוֹ שֶׁכָּתוּב גִּדָּה ל'); (as written in Niddah 30b);¹³ דִּנְקָרָא "גִּדָּה", and this is 'The spirit of man is the lamp of Hashem', "וְהָיָה ה' לְנֶשְׁמַת אָדָם", for it is termed 'the lamp of Hashem' to radiate unto him this illumination דְּהִפְרַת קְבוֹד מַלְכוּתוֹ יִתְבָּרַךְ מִכָּל הַבְּרִיאָה, of recognizing the glory of His sovereignty from all Creation, וְכִמוֹ שֶׁאָמְרָנוּ שֶׁנִּהְיָ הָאֹר שֶׁנִּבְרָא בְּיוֹם הָרִאשׁוֹן, and as we said, this is the light created on the first day שׁוֹפָה וּמִבֵּיט בּוֹ מִסּוּף הָעוֹלָם וְעַד סוּף הָעוֹלָם, whereby man gazed and saw from one end of the universe to the other, יִתְבָּרַךְ מִכָּל הַבְּרִיאָה קְבוֹד מַלְכוּתוֹ יִתְבָּרַךְ, דְּהָיָנוּ לְהִכִּיר מִכָּל הַבְּרִיאָה קְבוֹד מַלְכוּתוֹ יִתְבָּרַךְ, namely to perceive from all of Creation the glory of His sovereignty.

13 Niddah 30b; Job 29:2–4. English translation of source: "A lamp is kindled above [the fetus's] head, and it looks and sees from one end of the world to the other, as it says, 'When His lamp shone over my head, by His light I walked through darkness' [Job 29:3]. Do not wonder at this, for a person may sleep here and dream of [a place as far away as] Spain. ... There are no days in which a person enjoys greater happiness than those [in the womb] ... and they teach the fetus the whole Torah, as it says, 'He taught me and said to me: Let your heart hold fast my words; keep my commandments and live' [Proverbs 4:4]."Context and connection: The passage depicts prenatal existence as a state of unbroken awareness, not an ordinary physical claim about sight. Rav Tzadok uses its lamp above the head as the image of ohr makif—an encompassing light—restored in a distinct way through Shabbos and its added neshamah.

Further parallel — Beit Yaakov on Torah, Bereshit 27, paragraphs 16, 17, 18, 19 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "then an angel comes and strikes him on his mouth, causing him to forget it all; meaning that the sublime light he experienced in the womb did not come through his own choice, but was granted directly from the Blessed Name; yet upon emerging into the world he forgets it all, in order that henceforth he may acquire the light through his own righteous free choice. And this is why he strikes him on the mouth, as it is taught (Shabbat 33b): "The mouth concludes and completes."Connection to this note: This Ishbitz exposition adds the reason why light and knowledge received in the womb are subsequently hidden: they must be reacquired through free choice.Additional Chassidus source — Noam Elimelekh, Sefer Bereshit, Chayye Sara 6, source segment 3

English translation of the Hebrew: "Before a person enters the world he is taught the entire Torah; then an angel comes and strikes him upon the mouth, and it is forgotten. Why does all this occur? So that the Torah of Hashem may remain within the person in a concealed, potential state. When he afterward engages in Torah for its own sake, he attains the true Torah already inscribed within him."

Connection to this footnote: The prenatal lamp becomes a symbol of a concealed Torah knowledge that the person must recover through his own study.

14 Sanhedrin 91b; Genesis 4:7. English translation of source: "Antoninus said to Rabbi [Yehudah HaNasi]: From when does the evil inclination rule a human being—from the time of formation or from the time of emerging [from the womb]? He said to him: From the time of formation. Antoninus replied: If so, it would kick within its mother's womb and emerge! Rather, it begins from the time of emerging. Rabbi said: Antoninus taught me this matter, and a verse supports him, as it says, 'At the entrance sin crouches' [Genesis 4:7]."Context and connection: Rav Tzadok places this beside the Gemara's portrait of the unborn child illuminated by a lamp. Together they help portray the prenatal soul as protected from the dominion that ordinarily begins in worldly life. His claim about Shabbos is that a comparable sheltering influence returns with the extra neshamah.

Further parallel — Mei HaShiloach, Volume II, Genesis, Bereshit, teaching 7 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "and the power of man's personal toil was not yet recognizable in him; therefore, through the lovingkindness of Hashem, blessed be He, in order that man not eat the bread of shame (nahama d'chisufa), He cast upon him a deep slumber, meaning that He concealed the lucid supernal light, so that he exert himself through his own free choice, and personally discern his path; as it is written (Va'etchanan; Deuteronomy 4:39): 'Know this day, and consider it in your heart, that Hashem He is God', meaning that man eat the product of his own toil,"Connection to this note: The deliberate concealment of supernal light makes human choice possible, adding an Ishbitz–Radzin parallel to the distinction between prenatal illumination and postnatal spiritual struggle.Additional Chassidus source — Shem MiShmuel, Toldot 2, source segment 4 pure, a portion of God, והיינו מאורו יתברך, being drawn from His light, which is the first revelation of creation ex nihilo accessible to human comprehension.

And likewise on Shabbat the additional neshamah, וכמו כן בשבת הנשמה יתירה, concerning which they said in the holy Zohar that all perfection is within it like the World to Come, והוא גם כן הגר ש'על הראש, is also the lamp above the head, which is an encompassing light (Ohr Makif) אשר מקיף, such that the evil inclination has no dominion on Shabbat. הרע בשבת. Therefore they said (Bereishit Rabbah, Parashah 11): ברכו במאורות, עינין שם: 'He blessed it with luminaries', see there, which indicates that on Shabbat there is a revelation of that light of the first day. ומפורש גם בספר לקח שביעי ושם להם: And it is explicit also in Sefer HaBahir (section 160): והשאר גזנו לצדיקים, במקומו He took the seventh and set it for them in its place, and the rest He concealed for the righteous. ועל ידי גר שבת מתקנים פגם הנשמה של אדם. And through the Sabbath candle we rectify the blemish of man's neshamah הרע מ'יצר הרע, and are saved from the evil inclination, ויבמנרתא טבתא דנהרא על רישין, and this is what is meant by 'and with a good menorah shining upon our heads'.

And on weekdays, where there is one who has not merited and possesses only two levels, nefesh and ruach, וכחול, ש'ש מי שלא זכה ואית ביה תריני דרגין נפש ורוח, כמו שכתוב בהר הקדוש, the mitzvot of challah and niddah come as written in the holy Zohar, כ'א מצות חלה ונדה, to rectify the blemish of the Serpent in the two levels of nefesh and ruach, as explained. הפגם של הנחש בשתי מדרגות נפש ורוח, וכאמור And this opening discourse appears at the beginning of Parashat Noach על פי מה שאמרנו מהזר הקדוש based on what we explained from the holy Zohar and Midrash Rabbah, ומ'המדרש רבה ש'בדור, that in the Generation of the Flood the soul of Moses our teacher was present והיה הזמן ליתן להם התורה, and it was the time to give them the Torah, ויש לזה רמז, and there is an allusion to this in the Gemara as well (as explained above); and presumably it was then the time to rectify the entire blemish of the Serpent ונשמה הנחש, רוח ונשמה מדרגות נפש, across all three levels: nefesh, ruach, and neshamah.

English translation of the Hebrew: "People ask: What did [Yaakov] lack in his mother's womb, since our Sages said that a lamp was lit above his head, he gazed from one end of the world to the other, and an angel taught him the entire Torah? We can understand that Yaakov did not wish to leave for his own sake, but for the sake of Heaven—to join the two worlds through his service in this world."

Connection to this footnote: This complements the passage about prebirth illumination by distinguishing the gift of prenatal knowledge from the work of choice after birth.

completely accomplished; רק העולם נידון אחר רובו. only that the world is judged according to its majority. כל נפש בפרט המשמר שבת כהלכתו – מיד נגאל. Nonetheless, every individual soul who observes Shabbat according to its halakhah—is immediately redeemed.

15 Shabbat 118b. English translation of source: “‘Rav Nachman bar Yitzchak said: [One who delights in Shabbos] is saved from the subjugation of exiles, for it is written here, ‘I shall cause you to ride upon the high places of the earth,’ and written elsewhere, ‘You shall tread upon their high places.’ ... Rabbi Yochanan said in the name of Rabbi Shimon ben Yochai: Had Israel observed two Shabbosos according to their laws, they would have been redeemed immediately, as it says, ‘So says the Lord to the eunuchs who keep My Shabbosos,’ and afterward it says, ‘I shall bring them to My holy mountain.’” Context and connection: The sugya speaks of collective redemption, but Rav Tzadok broadens its spiritual logic: even for a single person, faithful Shabbos observance interrupts the weekday reign of the yetzer hara and opens an experience of personal redemption.

Further parallel — Takanat HaShavin 15 [paragraph 209] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “And at Marah they were commanded concerning the Shabbos (Shabbos 87b), as they stated [in Perec Rabi Akiva, Shabbos 118b]; for it is known that on Shabbos indulgence is a mitzvah, since all physical desires are then elevated into holiness. And this is the bitter element that sweetened the bitter: that through the bitterness of this world one merits the World that is entirely good and delightful; and likewise the six days of action and Shabbos which is a foretaste of the World to Come;” Connection to this note: The holiness of Shabbos elevates even bodily delight and thus underlies the link Rav Tzadok draws between observance of Shabbos and full personal redemption. Additional Chassidus source — Kedushat Levi, Exodus, Bo, source segment 14

English translation of the Hebrew: “Our Sages said that had Israel kept two Shabbosos they would immediately have been redeemed. The matter is that Shabbos indicates repentance—the letters of Shabbos can be read as “return”—and on the holy Shabbos Israel repent.”

Connection to this footnote: The connection between Shabbos observance and redemption is presented as a process of repentance, a close parallel to Rav Tzadok’s individual redemption.

The Gates of Wisdom in the Sixth Millennium

The Zohar's teaching about Noah's six-hundredth year reveals the opening of wisdom and the preparation for ultimate Shabbos.

ובשית מאה שנים¹⁶: In the holy Zohar (Vayeira 117a): "בזהר הקדוש (וירא קיז עמוד א) יתפתחון תרועי דחכמתא, 'And in the six hundredth year of the sixth millennium, the gates of wisdom above shall open and the wellsprings of wisdom below, etc.; and your mnemonic sign is: "In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, etc., all the fountains of the great deep burst open". And one must understand the allusion and the mnemonic sign: how does it point to the year six hundred of the sixth millennium? דשורש הגליות על פנים הברית, וזהו שכתוב בזהר חדש, וכתובות שבמשנה תורה על גלות האחרון (Ki Tavo) and as written in Zohar Chadash (Ki Tavo) and the admonitions in Deuteronomy pertain to the final exile, זכרוננו לברכה, and the Ari of blessed memory wrote על פנים זה. that the number ninety-eight (the 98 curses) alludes to this blemish.

And it is taught in the holy Zohar (Part I, 219b): "ואיתא בזהר הקדוש (חלק א, ריט עמוד ב) that he has no repentance and shall not behold the countenance of the Shekhinah, see there. (זהר חלק ב, ריד עמוד ב) ובמקום אחר (זהר חלק א, ריד עמוד ב) ואיתא: And elsewhere (Zohar Part II, 214b) it is taught:

16 Zohar I, Vayeira 117a (quotation preserved in Pri Tzaddik). English translation of source: "When the letter vav is completed within ten six times, there are sixty [stages] to raise [it] from the dust. At each sixty of that sixth millennium, the heh gains strength and rises through its levels. In the six-hundredth year of the sixth [millennium], the gates of wisdom above will open, together with the springs of wisdom below; and the world will be prepared to enter the seventh, like a person preparing on the sixth day, when the sun begins to set, to enter Shabbos. ... Your sign is: 'In the six-hundredth year of Noah's life ... all the springs of the great deep broke open' [Genesis 7:11]." Context and connection: These are the central clauses explicitly transmitted in Rav Tzadok's text. His explanation identifies the upper opening with the illumination of Written Torah and the lower wellsprings with Oral Torah and inner transformation; the image is interpreted within his account of teshuvah and yesod, not as a claim about any particular technology. The exact Zohar pagination varies by edition.

Further parallel — Tiferet Yosef, Noach 1 [paragraph 7] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "My revered father, my master and teacher, of blessed memory, explained regarding this that the primary beginning of the World of Rectification (Olam HaTikkun) began from Noah onward. For prior to Noah, existence was still within the state of the "worlds that were destroyed" (almin de-itcharavu). And as we see, previously it is written (Genesis 4:1-2): "and she bore Cain... and she bore further his brother Abel" — where there was as yet no cohesion or connection between one and the other; whereas from Noah onward the World of Rectification began, and here it is written: "Shem, Ham, and Japheth" linked together with the connecting 'vav' and direct accusatives, indicating that they possessed mutual connection and integration." Connection to this note: The Ishbitz–Radzin teaching explicitly identifies the Flood as the transition from the broken worlds into the World of Rectification, directly reinforcing the thematic setting of Ois 6. Additional Chassidus source — Bat Ayin, Shmini, source segment 71

English translation of the Hebrew: "Perhaps Rabbi Shimon bar Yochai alluded to this in the holy Zohar (Part I, 117a): when [the world] reaches the aspect of six hundred in the sixth millennium—that is, when it cleaves to the letter vav, the letter of truth, both outwardly and inwardly—then the redemption will surely arrive, speedily in our days, amen."

Connection to this footnote: Unlike merely general millennium symbolism, this Chassidic passage expressly discusses the Zohar passage quoted by Rav Tzadok.

and these words apply when he has not performed complete repentance, תְּיִוָּבְתָּא דְאִיהִי אֶתְחַזֵּיָא, repentance that is fitting to cover over all his deeds. לְחַפֵּיָא עַל כָּל עֲוֹבָדָיו וְהַמְכַוֵּן: מִי שְׂיֻבֵּל. And the meaning is: whoever is able to rectify the entire root corruption of the Serpent which occurred through this blemish when he injected contamination into Eve (כְּמוֹ שֶׁכְּתוּב שֶׁכֶּתַב שֶׁבַת קָמוּ), (as written in Shabbat 146a), and from this the contamination adhered to Adam the First as well, וּמִזֶּה נִדְבְּקָה הַזִּוּהָמָא גַם בְּאָדָם הָרִאשׁוֹן, and through this he became stretched in his foreskin, וְעַל יָדֵי כֵן נִעְשָׂה מְשׁוּךְ בְּעֶרְלָתוֹ, (as stated in Sanhedrin 38b), (כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּאֱמָר סְגֵה־רִין לַח), meaning that he was certainly created circumcised, וְעַל יָדֵי הַקִּלְקוּל נִעְשָׂה מְשׁוּךְ בְּעֶרְלָתוֹ, and through the corruption he became stretched in his foreskin; יְמֵי וְכִינּוֹן שֶׁהִיָּה בְּיוֹם הַשְּׁשִׁי בְּתוֹךְ יְמֵי, and since this occurred on the sixth day within the days of Creation, בְּרֵאשִׁית הוּא כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּבְרָא, therefore all his descendants are born uncircumcised. וְעַל כֵּן כָּל תּוֹלְדוֹתָיו נּוֹלָדִים עֲרֻלִּים, כִּף, it is as though he was created thus; and as written in the holy Zohar (Part I, 123a),

And through the contamination that the Serpent injected and which adhered to Adam the First, it caused corruption and blemish during the 130 years of his separation. וְהָיָה הַקִּלְקוּל וְהַפְגָּם בְּמֵאָה וּשְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁנָה, וְכִי שֶׁמֶתְקֵן כָּל שׁוּרָשׁ. And one who rectifies the entire root corruption of the Serpent's blemish—ought to live forever; צָרִיךְ לְהֵיוֹת חַי לְעוֹלָם, שֶׁאָדָם הָרִאשׁוֹן נֶאֱמָר לוֹ: "כִּי בְּיוֹם אֶכְלֶךְ, for to Adam the First it was said: 'for in the day that you eat thereof you shall surely die', yet he lived 930 years; וְחַי תֵּשַׁע מֵאוֹת וּשְׁלֹשִׁים שָׁנָה, and this is because the day of the Holy One, blessed be He, is one thousand years, אֵלֶּיךָ שָׁנָה, as it is said: 'For a thousand years in Your sight are but as yesterday'.¹⁷ Namely, the seven days of Creation are the seven sefirotic attributes, שֶׁבַע פְּעֻמִּים שֶׁבַע, and 'refined sevenfold'—seven times seven, וְהֵינּוּ אַרְבָּעִים וְתֵשַׁע שְׁעָרֵי בִינָה, which equals the forty-nine gates of understanding; וְכֹשֶׁל עֶשֶׂר הַמְּדוּת כְּלוּלִים מֵעֶשֶׂר, and when all ten attributes are each comprised of ten, מִסְפַּר שָׁלֹשׁ, it equals one hundred years, a complete number, and as written in the holy Zohar (Part I, 123a), וְכְמוֹ שֶׁכְּתוּב בְּזֹהַר הַקִּדּוּשׁ (חֵלֶק א', כַּג עֲמֻד א')

¹⁷ Psalms 90:4. English translation of source: “For a thousand years in Your sight are like yesterday when it has passed, and like a watch in the night.” Context and connection: Rav Tzadok uses this verse as the scriptural basis for the aggadic analogy in which a millennium corresponds to a day. He then places the sixth millennium alongside the sixth day of creation and the sixth middah, yesod. That numerical and kabbalistic mapping is his developed interpretation rather than a literal calendar calculation supplied by the verse.

Further parallel — Beit Yaakov on Torah, Noach 1, paragraphs 48, 49, 50, 51 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “And this is what the Talmud states (Sanhedrin 97a): “Six thousand years the world will exist”; which refers to the temporal garments of this world that will dissolve in the Seventh Millennium, having boundaries in time just as they hold boundaries across the six dimensions of space, whereupon the inward essence and divine depth will radiate eternally. Therefore one illuminated by the Sabbath light, looking solely into the essence within the garments, cleaves to the light that transcends all boundaries.” Connection to this note: This parallel interprets the six thousand years as the time-bound external garment and the seventh as a revelation of the eternal interior; it is useful context, not an alternate textual reading of Tehillim. Additional Chassidus source — Yismach Moshe, Vayechi 1, source segment 2 English translation of the Hebrew: “The Sages answered that a day of the Holy One, blessed be He, is a thousand years. Yet this needs understanding, for time is measured by the daily motion, whereas before the Infinite a moment and a thousand years belong to one category.”

Connection to this footnote: This adds a careful theological qualification to the thousand-years-as-a-day analogy: divine reality is not governed by ordinary measured time.

וְכָשֶׁל הַמִּדּוֹת כְּלוּלִים בְּעֶשֶׂר; וְזֶה בְּכָל מִדָּה and this applies to each attribute; and when all attributes are comprised of ten, הוּא אֵלֶּף שָׁנָה, יוֹמוֹ נֶשֶׁל הַקָּדוֹשׁ בְּרוּךְ הוּא, it equals one thousand years, the day of the Holy One, blessed be He.

And Adam the First was able to live nine hundred years וְאָדָם הָרִאשׁוֹן הָיָה יָכוֹל לַחְיֹת תְּשַׁע מֵאוֹת שָׁנָה and into the tenth century as well; וּבִמְאֹה הַעֲשִׂירִית גַּם כֵּן he would have needed to rectify the entire blemish of the Serpent totally, וְאִזּוֹ הָיָה חַי לְעוֹלָם, and then he would have lived forever. וְכֵן מִי שֶׁהָיָה מְתַקֵּן כָּל הַקְּלָקוּל בְּשִׁלְמוֹת whoever would rectify the entire corruption in completeness, שֶׁנֶּהוּ הַמְכֻוֵּן בְּמָה שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר which is the meaning of that which is stated: "תִּיבֻתָּא דְאִיָּהּ אֶתְחִינְא לְחַפְיָא עַל כָּל עוֹבְדוּי" 'repentance that is fitting to cover over all his deeds'— he would live forever. וְזֶה הָיָה חַי לְעוֹלָם. And since there was not yet anyone who rectified thus the entire blemish totally כִּתְּבָהּ בְּזֵהָר, שֶׁיִּזְכֶּה שְׂיִהְיֶה חַי לְעוֹלָם, such that he merit to live forever, הַקָּדוֹשׁ דָּלָא אֵית לֵיהּ תְּשׁוּבָה. the holy Zohar wrote that he has no repentance.

Now behold, seven thousand years correspond to the seven days of Creation, וְהִנֵּה שִׁבְעַת אֲלָפִים שָׁנָה כְּנֶגֶד שִׁבְעַת יָמֵי בְּרָאשִׁית; which are the seven attributes; וְשֶׁהֵם שִׁבְעֵי הַמִּדּוֹת, and the world lies desolate for one thousand years, וְהָעוֹלָם מְשֻׁמָּט אֵלֶּף שָׁנִים (as stated in Sanhedrin 97a end). (כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר סִנְהֶדְרִין צו סוּף עֲמוּד א) which is the day that is entirely Shabbat וְזֶה שֶׁלֹּא נֶאֱמַר "כִּי טוֹב" בְּיוֹם הַשְּׁנִי And this explains why 'that it was good' was not said on the second day, וְזֶה שֶׁלֹּא נֶאֱמַר "כִּי טוֹב" בְּיוֹם הַשְּׁנִי, which alludes to the second millennium, שֶׁבָּא הָיָה דוֹר הַמְּבֻיָּל וְדוֹר הַפְּלִגָּה, in which occurred the Generation of the Flood and the Generation of the Dispersion; וְאִין טוֹב אֵלָּא צָדִיק, and 'good' means nothing other than Tzaddik (the righteous), אֵסֵר שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר: "אִמְרוּ צָדִיק כִּי טוֹב, as it is said: 'Say of the righteous that he is good' (כְּמוֹ שֶׁנֶּאֱמַר חֲגִיגָה יב). (as stated in Chagigah 12a).

18 Sanhedrin 97a. English translation of source: “‘Rav Ketina said: The world lasts six thousand years, and for one [thousand years] it is desolate, as it says, ‘And the Lord alone shall be exalted on that day’ [Isaiah 2:11]. Abaye said: For two [thousand years] it is desolate, as it says, ‘After two days He will revive us; on the third day He will raise us up, and we shall live before Him’ [Hosea 6:2].” Context and connection: Rav Tzadok cites the seven-thousand-year pattern and relates it to the six days of creation followed by Shabbos. His further division of the millennia according to divine attributes supplies the conceptual bridge to Noah’s six-hundredth year. The passage should be read as theological symbolism within the rabbinic discussion, not as an independently verified prediction.

Further parallel — Dover Tzedek, Kuntres Ner HaMitzvot, segment 1 [paragraph 13] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “for one who stands in darkness encounters darkness first, followed by the light. And so was the historic order of the world: two thousand years of void (Tohu), followed by two thousand years of Torah (Sanhedrin 97a); but for one who stands in the daylight, daytime work comes first, followed by the night to rest from his labor;” Connection to this note: The two-thousand-year stages and the order from darkness toward light supply a wider cosmic frame for Rav Tzadok’s millennial analogy. Additional Chassidus source — Shem MiShmuel, Eikev 5, source segment 9

English translation of the Hebrew: “Thus the world conducts itself during all the six thousand years of its existence, until the seventh millennium, which is wholly Shabbos. But Israel have been promised by Him, blessed be He, that before the seventh millennium all will have been repaired, without blemishes or missing limbs in the World to Come, God forbid.”

Connection to this footnote: The sixth-to-seventh-millennium transition is linked to completing the work of repair before the eternal Shabbos.

19 Isaiah 3:10; Chagigah 12a. English translation of source: “Isaiah 3:10: ‘Say of the righteous that it shall be good, for they will eat the fruit of their deeds.’ Chagigah 12a: ‘Rabbi Elazar said: By the light that the Holy One, blessed be He, created on the first day, Adam could look from one end of the world to the other. One saw the generation of the Flood and the generation of the Dispersion, and saw that their deeds were corrupt, He arose and concealed it from them, as it says, 'Their light is withheld from the wicked' [Job 38:15]. For whom did He conceal it? For the righteous in the future, as it says, 'God saw that the light was good'; and 'good' means the righteous, as it says, 'Say of the righteous that it is good.'"Context and connection: The link is pivotal for Rav Tzadok: the flood generation's failure entails loss of access to this higher light, but the righteous person who preserves the covenant becomes a vessel for it. The discussion of the second day's missing 'good' is a related midrashic theme rather than the main argument of Chagigah 12a.

Further parallel — Tiferet Yosef, Bereshit 1 [paragraph 11] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "Rather, it is because Hashem willed that His divine light should clothe itself within the cognitive grasp and vessel of creation; and since the primordial light was still completely overt and transcendent before creation, and creation possesses no capacity to absorb such an explicit, unmasked light, this condition is perceived from the vantage point of creation as "darkness"; as it is stated in the Holy Zohar (Balak 204b): "The primordial light with which the Holy One, blessed be He, created the world — the world was unable to endure it. What did the Holy One, blessed be He, do? He fashioned light within light, and glory within glory, to enclothe one within the other.""Connection to this note: Tiferes Yosef explains why the original light of Creation needed a garment; this illuminates the source about the hidden light reserved for the righteous.Additional Chassidus source — Noam Elimelekh, Sefer Devarim, Re'eh 1, source segment 2

English translation of the Hebrew: "The truth is that Hashem, in His abundant mercies, creates light continually. To the righteous person who walks in His ways faithfully and sincerely, the hidden light becomes visible and revealed; and on each day that the righteous person advances to a higher level, more of the light is disclosed to him."

Connection to this footnote: This closely parallels the notion that the primordial light is preserved for the righteous and is unveiled through spiritual refinement.

20 Niddah 13b; Genesis 38:9–10. English translation of source: "Niddah 13b: 'The Sages taught: Converts and those who 'play with children' delay the Messiah. ... But what does 'those who play with children' mean? If it refers to intercourse between males, those who do so are liable to stoning! Rather, [the discussion concerns] intercourse by way of other limbs, and these are 'people of the Flood.'" Genesis 38:9–10: 'Onan knew that the offspring would not be his. When he came to his brother's wife, he wasted [his seed] upon the ground so as not to give offspring to his brother. What he did was evil in the eyes of the Lord, and He put him to death also.'"Context and connection: Rav Tzadok invokes the Flood generation as the paradigmatic corruption of the covenantal power of yesod. The source supplies the severity of the comparison; his further connection of the generation's failing to the sixth day, the sixth millennium and the spiritual work of restoration is an interpretive expansion.

Further parallel — Peri Tzadik, Noah 2 [paragraph 8] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "Now behold, it is known that the primary sin of the Generation of the Flood lay predominantly in the blemish of the Covenant (immorality), as it is stated: 'for all flesh had corrupted its way, etc.'; and Abraham knew that his seed would stem from the souls of the Generation of the Flood who stumbled in the sin of blemish of the Covenant, and the Land of Israel does not tolerate such sinners,"Connection to this note: Rav Tzadok's separate discourse on the generation of the Flood connects its corruption specifically to the covenant, the governing concern of Ois 6.Additional Chassidus source — Be'er Mayim Chaim, Genesis 6, source segment 3.6

English translation of the Hebrew: "Because the generation of the Flood sinned in illicit relations, which Scripture calls "flesh of kinship," He said, "Inasmuch as he is flesh": because they sinned with their flesh, I must bring the waters of the Flood upon them; as our Sages said, they corrupted through heated waters and were judged by heated waters."

Midrash: וְרָשָׁעִים אֵלּוּ עוֹמְדִים לָתֵת, 'I make peace in My world, אֲנִי עוֹשֶׂה שְׁלוֹם בְּעוֹלָמִי וְהֵי כֹל "and these wicked ones arise to bring discord into the world, etc.: "מִחֲלֹקֶת בְּעוֹלָם וְכוּלִי וְאֵף דְּאִיתָא "And the whole earth was of one language, etc." "בְּבִרְאשִׁית רַבָּה עַל פְּסוּק וְהֵי And even though it is taught in Bereishit Rabbah on this verse that they loved one another, לְפִיכָךְ וְשִׁפְטִיָּהּ מִהֶן פְּלִיטָה, and therefore a remnant survived from them, יִתְבָּרַךְ, nonetheless Hashem foresaw שְׁכִינוּס that their gathering would cause division and strife, וְהִכְנוּס שְׁלָהֶם יִגְרוּם הַפִּירּוּד וְתִמְחֻלָּהּ, and therefore אַחֲרָיו כִּי, for afterward each one would seek to dominate his fellow; וְהִכְנוּס שְׁלָהֶם רַק לְחִלּוֹק עַל הַמָּקוֹם בְּרוּךְ הוּא, and their gathering was solely to rebel against the Omnipresent, blessed be He, רַע לָהֶם וְרַע לְעוֹלָם, and this is 'a gathering of the wicked is bad for them and bad for the world' (as stated in Sanhedrin 71b);²² וְכֵן הָיוּ אַחֲרָיו כִּי הוֹרְגִים זֶה בָּזֶה, and so afterward they were killing Connection to this footnote: The Flood is presented as a consequence of bodily and covenantal corruption, directly supporting Rav Tzadok's reading of the blemish requiring repair.

21 Midrash Tanchuma, Noah 16; Genesis 11:1. English translation of source: "Rabbi Yehoshua ben Levi said: They instituted the joining of courtyards [eiruvei chatzeiros] only for the sake of peace. How so? A woman sends her son to her neighbor, and the neighbor bends down and kisses him. His mother says: 'She truly loves him,' and affection for her enters her heart; thus, through the eiruv, they make peace. The Holy One, blessed be He, said: 'I make peace in My world, but these wicked ones are setting out to bring strife into the world.' How do we know that they disputed with the Holy One? From the verse that begins the matter: 'And the whole earth was of one language and of united words' [Genesis 11:1]."Context and connection: An eruv makes distinct homes function cooperatively; the word itself suggests joining. But the Midrash shows why uniform language and collective effort are not sufficient. Rav Tzadok contrasts unity ordered toward Hashem's peace with an alliance organized around rebellion.

Further parallel — Mei HaShiloach, Volume I, Genesis, Noah, teaching 1 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "The concept of the Ark is that Hashem, blessed be He, gave counsel and protection to Noah until the days of wrath passed, and likewise for anyone whose heart has not yet been purified, he can learn strategies how to conceal himself and protect himself from every evil that rages in the world; and so our Sages of blessed memory said (Tanna DeBei Eliyahu Rabbah, chapter 6): if a person sees afflictions coming upon him, let him run to the innermost chambers of Torah, and she gives him counsel how to be saved."Connection to this note: The Ark represents protection through Torah during a period of danger and concealment, contrasting destructive floodwaters with the waters that ultimately nourish spiritual life.Additional Chassidus source — Torah Ohr, Noah 4, source segment 17

English translation of the Hebrew: "Therefore, "Come, let us confuse their language." The dispersal of the wicked benefits them and benefits the world, while the gathering of the righteous—who nullify themselves before Hashem—benefits them and benefits the world, for through their inclusion together an influence is drawn from a higher place."

Connection to this footnote: This source interprets the dispersion of the Generation of the Dispersion through the distinction between destructive and holy unity.

22 Sanhedrin 71b. English translation of source: "The wine and sleep of the wicked are good for them and good for the world; the wine and sleep of the righteous are bad for them and bad for the world. The dispersal of the wicked is good for them and good for the world; the dispersal of the righteous is bad for them and bad for the world. The gathering of the wicked is bad for them and bad for the world; the gathering of the righteous is good for them and good for the world."Context and connection: The same social phenomenon—people coming together—can bring blessing or destruction, depending on the moral character and purpose of the assembly. Rav Tzadok uses the principle to explain why the apparent solidarity of the Tower generation was not the unity of holiness.

Further parallel — Mei HaShiloach, Volume II, Genesis, Noah, teaching 1 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "And behold, this was the central, quintessential utterance for the entire developmental unfolding of Creation, that they should desire unity and not be separated; for previously, is sown for the righteous',²⁶ יִצְרוֹ נְשִׂיאַ מִבְּחִינַת צַדִּיק, for Hashem bestows upon one who overpowers his inclination, which is from the aspect of Tzaddik, מֵאוֹר הָרֵאשׁוֹן נֶהְיָה חֻכְמָה דְּלֵעִילָא, from the primordial light which is supernal Chokhmah, כִּמוֹ שֶׁמִּקְבָּלֶת מִקּוּצַּא דִּיזוֹד דְּלֵעִילָא דְרַמְיָא לְקֶדֶר עֲלִיוֹן, just as it receives from the apex of the supernal Yod which hints to Keter Elyon.

"And the wellsprings of wisdom below' is the Oral Torah, וּמִבּוֹעֵי דְחֻכְמָתָא לְתַתָּא "הוא התורה שֶׁבַעַל פֶּה, which is 'much wisdom' to rectify 'much grief', וְנֶהְיָה חֻכְמָה לְתַקֵּן הָרַב כְּעַס, וְזֶה מוֹעִיל לִיִּישָׁר הַלֵּב לְהוֹרִיק הָרַע מִלֵּב כְּסִיל גַּם בֵּן, and this avails to straighten the heart and empty the evil from the heart of a fool as well. (תַּעֲנִית טו.) And this is what they said (Ta'anit 15a): "אֹרֶךְ יָרַע לְצַדִּיק, righteous ones—unto light, for it is written: 'Light is sown for the righteous',²⁷ וְהֵינּוּ אֹרֶךְ הָרֵאשׁוֹן נְשִׂיאַ מִבְּחִינַת צַדִּיק לְצַדִּיק

26 Psalms 97:11. English translation of source: “‘Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for those whose hearts are upright.’” Context and connection: Rav Tzadok understands the righteous, particularly the person who guards the covenant and resists the yetzer, as fit to receive a higher light. He links this sown light to supernal wisdom and Written Torah; the verse supports the theme of promised illumination, while that specific Torah-mapping comes from his exposition.

Further parallel — Tzidkat HaTzadik 261 [paragraph 1] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “The Holy One, blessed be He, His glory fills the whole earth, and there is no place devoid of Him, only that He is in deep concealment, “He made darkness His secret place” (Psalms 18:12). And when this recognition shines into man’s heart—how Hashem fills the whole earth with His glory— this is termed “He brought us forth from darkness to a great light,” as recited in the Haggadah.” Connection to this note: The passage identifies liberation from darkness with the revelation of divine presence, helping explain the specific promise of light granted to the righteous. Additional Chassidus source — Tiferet Shlomo, on Festivals, Sukkot, source segment 20

English translation of the Hebrew: “The hidden light of the six days of Creation was concealed for the righteous in the future—that is, for the righteous of every generation who would come, even in our own day. That illumination is revealed on Shabbosos and festivals.”

Connection to this footnote: The concealed light is described as available to the righteous across the generations and as manifest especially on holy days.

27 Taanit 15a; Psalms 97:11. English translation of source: “‘Rav Nachman bar Yitzchak said: I too say that not everyone [is destined] for light, and not everyone for gladness. The righteous are [destined] for light, and the upright for gladness. The righteous for light, as it says, ‘Light is sown for the righteous’; and the upright for gladness, as it says, ‘And for the upright of heart, gladness’ [Psalm 97:11].”” Context and connection: Rav Tzadok employs this rabbinic pairing to distinguish the revelation of higher light through Written Torah from the illuminating delight of Oral Torah, which straightens understanding and the heart. This identification of the two Torah dimensions is his own interpretive continuation.

Further parallel — Sod Yesarim, Shabbat Chol HaMoed Sukkot, section 2, paragraph 1 (translated directly from the Hebrew archive): “My father, the holy Gaon of blessed memory, explained that on Shabbos there is every perfection. For from the side of the Blessed Name, there is a great expansion, as the holy Zohar states (Yisro 88a): ‘By it all the supernal days are blessed.’ And from the side of man there is great contraction; for whoever wishes to have a share and recognition in the spreading of His blessed light that shines on Shabbos must, for his own part, greatly contract himself.” Connection to this note: This teaching from the Radzin corpus presents Shabbos as both an expansion of divine light and an inward restraint by the human being; the translation here is made afresh from the Hebrew-only archive. Additional Chassidus source — Bnei Yissaschar, Shabbat 6, source segment 21.1

English translation of the Hebrew: “The Shabbos lamp is an illumination from the hidden light, of which it is written, “God saw that the light was good.” Therefore the lighting of lamps is described in Scripture by the expression of making good the lamps; some of our earlier masters were meticulous to light thirty-six lamps corresponding to the thirty-six hours during which the hidden light served Adam before it was concealed.”

Connection to this footnote: The statement directly connects the Shabbos lamp to the primordial light reserved for the righteous.

מִצַּד הַשֵּׁם יִתְפָּרַךְ meaning the primordial light which Hashem bestows upon the Tzaddik from Hashem's side; מִהָאֹר שֶׁנִּגְנָז לְעֵתִיד לְבֹא from the light that was concealed for the World to Come; "וְלִישָׁרִים", דְּבָרֵיב: "and to the upright", for it is written: 'and gladness to the upright in heart', "אֹר צְדִיקִים יִשְׂמַח", and this is as it is written: 'The light of the righteous rejoices',²⁸ מִבּוֹנֵי פֶה, אֹר תּוֹרָה שֶׁכָּעֵל פֶּה, דְּחֻקְמָתָא לְתַתָּא, for through the light of the righteous—the light of the Oral Torah, the wellsprings of wisdom below, זֹכָה לְשִׁמְחָה, which avails to straighten the heart—one merits joy.

And regarding this the holy Zohar said: 'and your sign is: In the six hundredth year of Noah's life',²⁹ "אִישׁ צְדִיק"

28 Proverbs 13:9. English translation of source: "The light of the righteous rejoices, but the lamp of the wicked is extinguished." Context and connection: Rav Tzadok joins this verse to Tehillim's 'Light is sown for the righteous.' Together they show both a light bestowed from above and a light that grows into joy through the right ordering of the heart. In his reading, this points to the relationship between Written and Oral Torah.

Further parallel — Ohr Zarua LaTzadik, Introduction [paragraph 9] (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "my friend, the eminent and pious Rabbi Eliezer Tzvi Ziegelman, may his lamp shine, remarked: it is named after the verse, "but all the children of Israel had light in their dwellings" [Exodus 10:23], since the first treatise in this holy work discusses the exile and Exodus from Egypt, thus far his words. But in my view, it is named after the verse (Psalms 97:11): "Light is sown for the righteous, and gladness for the upright in heart." And it is stated in the holy Zohar (I, 45b) and in Zohar Chadash (Bereishit 8c): When the Holy One, blessed be He, gazed upon those generations of the wicked, He concealed the primordial light for the righteous, as it is written: "Light is sown for the righteous, etc."; see there. And in Sefer HaBahir (sec. 147) on this verse: The Holy One, blessed be He, took from His good light and included within it the thirty-two paths of Wisdom, bestowing it upon this world... which is none other than the treasury of the Oral Torah; see there." Connection to this note: The title of Ohr Zarua LaTzadik is linked directly to the verse in this note and to the light concealed for the righteous. Additional Chassidus source — Shem MiShmuel, Re'eh 7, source segment 18

English translation of the Hebrew: "Bar Kappara said in the Midrash: The soul and the Torah were compared to a lamp. The soul, as Scripture says, "The soul of man is the lamp of Hashem"; and the Torah, as it says, "A commandment is a lamp and Torah is light." The Holy One said to man: My lamp is in your hand—this is Torah; your lamp is in My hand—this is the soul. If you guard My lamp, I shall guard yours."

Connection to this footnote: The pairing of Torah and soul as two lamps sharpens the contrast between the light of the righteous and the extinguished lamp of the wicked.

29 Genesis 7:11. English translation of source: "In the six-hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, on the seventeenth day of the month—on that very day all the fountains of the great deep burst forth, and the windows of heaven were opened." Context and connection: The Zohar makes the year-number a symbolic sign for the sixth millennium: earthly wellsprings and heavenly openings correspond to different manifestations of wisdom. Rav Tzadok's reading reverses the Flood's destructive imagery into the possibility of a new release of Torah illumination capable of helping a person return.

Further parallel — Mei HaShiloach, Volume I, Genesis, Noah, teaching 3 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "Behold, this thought of Hashem, blessed be He, became known to Noah inasmuch as profound awe was ingrained in his heart after the Deluge, that it is inappropriate for man to expand himself unchecked according to his own desire, and he must only restrain his spirit; from this he understood that such was likewise the will of Hashem, blessed be He, that He would not curse the ground anymore." Connection to this note: The Flood produces lasting reverence and self-restraint; this gives the image of the fountains breaking open a moral counterpoint within Ishbitz thought. Additional Chassidus source — Shem MiShmuel, Noah 6, source segment 8

English translation of the Hebrew: "In the generation of the Flood there came, in reincarnation, very elevated souls that had fallen among the husks since the days of Adam. The holy Zohar says that destructive angels accompanied the Flood waters; accordingly, it may be said that those souls suffered afflictions at their hands throughout the twelve months, until they were cleansed for a further incarnation."

Connection to this footnote: This supplies a distinct Chassidic reading of the Flood waters as a process of purification, not only destruction.

for Noah is called 'a righteous man'³⁰ דורו דור המבול, because he did not corrupt himself like the blemish of his generation, the Generation of the Flood, and merited likewise to be the Chariot for the attribute of Tzaddik, Foundation of the World; and when he lived six hundred years it was corresponding to Yesod of Yesod, and then was the time to give the Written Torah through the soul of Moses our teacher, who was present then, as stated in Ra'aya Meheimna (Zohar Part III, 216b); yet the Generation of the Flood refused to receive it, and as written (Shemot Rabbah, Parashah 30) on the verse 'And the knowledge of Your ways we do not desire'—this is Torah.

Therefore it was hinted: 'all the fountains of the great deep burst open', which alludes to the wellsprings of wisdom below, for since they did not want to receive the Written Torah, Hashem radiated to them the wellsprings of wisdom below, which is the light of the Oral Torah, perhaps it would avail them if they willed it; and this is likewise hinted in the verse: 'And the knowledge of Your ways, etc.', and knowledge specifically, as we explained above.

And this is what it stated in the holy Zohar: that in the six hundredth year of the sixth millennium the gates of wisdom above and the wellsprings of wisdom below shall open; it stated the supernal wisdom first, 30 Genesis 6:9. English translation of source: "These are the generations of Noah: Noah was a righteous man, wholehearted in his generations; Noah walked with God." Context and connection: Rav Tzadok gives 'righteous' its further kabbalistic force: the tzaddik is connected with yesod, the covenantal foundation. Because Noah resisted his generation's corruption, the six-hundredth year of his life becomes an apt symbolic marker for the point called yesod within yesod.

Further parallel — Mei HaShiloach, Volume I, Genesis, Noah, teaching 7 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): "and it is brought in the Midrash (Bereishit Rabbah 39:7): the Holy One, blessed be He, said to Abraham our father: You I exempt from honoring a father. The concept in this is that with Noah Hashem likewise sealed a covenant, yet the covenant sealed with Noah was not in the manner He sealed with Abraham our father, peace be upon him; for with Noah Hashem, blessed be He, sealed a covenant according to derekh eretz (natural worldly order) as explained, and as it is stated: 'And I will establish My covenant with you; neither shall all flesh be cut off anymore', since following the awe of the Deluge he accepted upon himself not to expand unchecked as mentioned, and Hashem, blessed be He, likewise agreed not to destroy the world, and Noah began to engage in derekh eretz," Connection to this note: Mei HaShiloach distinguishes the natural covenant with Noah from the later covenant with Avraham, sharpening the role of the righteous figure within the Flood narrative. Additional Chassidus source — Tiferet Shlomo, on Torah, Noah, source segment 1

English translation of the Hebrew: "This entire verse hints at the Shabbos day, for the essence of rest is found on Shabbos. Elsewhere the holy Zohar says concerning Shabbos that it is rest above and rest below, and all the blessings above and below depend on the seventh day. Here, too, the Zohar explains that Noah corresponds to the Shabbos day."

Connection to this footnote: The correspondence between Noah and Shabbos deepens the Torah's description of him as a righteous person and a source of rest.

ואז הזמן לפתוח שערי חכמה עליונה, תורה, for this is already after the Giving of the Torah, "אור ורוע לצדיק", and then is the time to open the gates of supernal wisdom which is 'light sown for the righteous', כַּאֲמֹר, and the Oral Torah which is 'the light of the righteous rejoices', as explained. And it concludes in the holy Zohar: "וַיִּתְּקֵן עֲלֵמָא לֵאמָר בְּשִׁבְעָא", 'and the world will be prepared to enter into the seventh, like a man who prepares on the sixth day from the setting of the sun to enter into Shabbat'.³¹

כנגד שש המדות, ישות ימי בראשית Namely, the number six hundred והיינו דמספר שש מאות, corresponds to the six attributes, the six days of Creation, שכל אחד כלול מעשר פעמים עשר, where each is comprised of ten times ten, as we said; ויבנו שש מאות, and these are the six attributes wherein man must refine himself from his own initiative, to rectify the blemish in the aspect of Tzaddik which lies in eating and desires. And afterward the four hundred years wherein Hashem bestows from the first three Sefirot—Chokhmah, Binah, Da'at: the gates of wisdom above and the wellsprings of wisdom below; and afterward the final one hundred years corresponding to the attribute of Malchut, and these are the Days of the Messiah which exist within the extension of the Sabbath, leading into the seventh millennium, the day that is entirely Shabbat.

31 Zohar I, Vayeira 117a (conclusion as preserved in Pri Tzaddik). English translation of source: “‘In the six-hundredth year of the sixth [millennium], the gates of wisdom above will open, and the springs of wisdom below, and the world will be readied to enter into the seventh, like a person preparing on the sixth day, once the sun has begun to set, to enter into Shabbos. So too [with the world]. And your sign is: ‘In the six-hundredth year of Noah’s life ... all the fountains of the great deep burst open’ [Genesis 7:11].”” Context and connection: The sequence of images is essential: opening wisdom is preparation for a sanctified seventh period, not an end in itself. Rav Tzadok interprets the number six hundred through the six middos and the human task of refining desire; the final approach to Shabbos denotes a divine completion beyond human effort. The wording follows the excerpt in Pri Tzaddik because Zohar editions use differing foliation.

Further parallel — Beit Yaakov on Torah, Noach 1, paragraphs 48, 49, 50, 51 (English translation as supplied in Akiva Publishing interlinear library): “And this is what the Talmud states (Sanhedrin 97a): “Six thousand years the world will exist”; which refers to the temporal garments of this world that will dissolve in the Seventh Millennium, having boundaries in time just as they hold boundaries across the six dimensions of space, whereupon the inward essence and divine depth will radiate eternally. Therefore one illuminated by the Sabbath light, looking solely into the essence within the garments, cleaves to the light that transcends all boundaries.” Connection to this note: Beis Yaakov explicitly describes the passage from the sixth millennium’s bounded garments into a seventh-millennium revelation; the wording is an independent parallel to Ois 6, not the Zohar text itself. Additional Chassidus source — Shem MiShmuel, Eikev 5, source segment 9 English translation of the Hebrew: “All the commandments and repairs from the many incarnations are gathered together, and from them a complete, repaired stature is formed. So the world proceeds through the six thousand years of its existence until the seventh millennium, all of which is Shabbos.”

Connection to this footnote: The sixth millennium prepares and gathers the many partial acts of repair into the wholeness of the seventh, complementing Rav Tzadok’s concluding account of the opened gates of wisdom.
